People that say that they don't care about privacy because they have nothing to hide have not really thought deeply about the issues. Because what they are really saying is that I don't care about this right. When you say I don't care about the right to privacy is like saying I don't care about freedom of speech because I have nothing to say or freedom of the press because I have nothing to write. - Edward Snowden

"Saying that you don't care about the right to privacy because you have nothing to hide it's no different than saying you don't care about freedom of speech because you have nothing to say. It's a fundamentally un-American principle. And more than nationalism, more than what this country is about, it's a deeply antisocial principle. Because rights are not just individual, they are collective, and what may not be of value to you today may have value to an entire population, an entire people, or an entire way of life tomorrow. And if you don't stand for it, then who will?”
